SHANGHAI papers of the 15th inst, report the following accident :- A, foreigner whilst out shooting yesterday morning about 9 o'clock in the vicinity of the New Rifle Range, by accident fired his shot gun into a group of Chinese and wounded seven men. Some were sent to the St. Luke's Hospital. One man, it is learned, sustained severe injury to his eye. The magistrate of the district is making a claim on behalf of the injured men and there will probably be an enquiry at the Consulate concerned, as the name and address of the foreigner is known.

WE are glad to see Mr. H. V. R. Kemball, C.E., Executive Engineer, P. W. D. Poona, protesting in the press against, the stupid vandalism of visitors to places of historical and archieological interest who cut and write names on the walls or pillars, says Indian Engineering. The old Buddhist caves at Rarli are badly disfigured by this caddish diversion, and we can point to other places in India which have suffered similarly. There should be a penal enactmen against such practices, and we trust that Lore Curzon, who has the preservation of old monu ments so much at heart, will give the sugges tion his carnest consideration.

"THE eggs of a scavenger hen are not fit to be eaten," says Dr. J. H. Kellog, writing in Modern Madicine. " My attention was called to this a number of years ago. A lady said she would not cat our eggs. She wanted sunflower eggs." I-told her we had the best eggs in the country, but she wanted sunflower eggs." I asked her what she meant by that, and she said that an old German at home fed his chickens on sunflowerseeds, and that the eggs were remarkably sweet. Some of the eggs were sent for, partake of the strong, rank flavours that they have swallowed with their food."

THE following, amusing story, concerning the relations existing between American officers and their men is going the rounds. During the operations prior to the successful arrival of the allies at Pekin, an American volunteer artillery battery came into action. An English naval officer was standing by one of the guns when a Yankee officer hurried up. "Would you mind," he said, in most polite accents, knocking that hut into atoms." The gunner laid the gun and did the needful. "Many: thanks," said the officer, before departing, much obliged. The English naval officer could-not contain his curiosity. "Why didn't he order you to do it, instead of making all that fuss?" he asked. "Waal, you see, it's this way," was the reply. "When we're not soldiering we're both in the jewellery trade, same shop. Only I'm the boss of the store, and he's the assistant !"

An Allegheny press dispatch says of 6th March :- Cecil Sherbrooke, Beaumount Hawlond, Earl of Wargrave, and a Knight of the Garter of Britain's court, lies, dead in the General Hospital, known as plain C. B. Howland." The dead nobleman was employed as a foreman of one of the departments of the Pressed Steel Car Commonwa Matter Rocks. He boarded at the Sauers Hofel for the past year, but had not told any one of his position in England. He was taken sick two weeks ago with typhoid fever and it was while examining the dead man's effects to learn something of his relatives that the hotelkeeper found that Howland was a nobleman. Among the letters were several from A J. Harrison, of 32 Broadway, New York The rice was, cooked by the Gaol cook. The who claims to be a brother of the deal of Beresford, Gray and Seymour, of London down; you do get six ounces. England, notines Howland of his succession the title and estates of his uncle, Edward, Eal of Wargrave. The writer addressed the Pitt burger as "My Lord," and hoped that h would shortly reach to England to enter in possession of his estates. In the letter from the brother occurs the sentence : " Ithink yo

In the afternoon he came again and the goods were removed to sampans. On the bill being handed to prisoner he said he could not pay cash down, so Mi Encarnacio, of Ritchie & Co., went with him in a steamlaunch with the sampans containing th goods in tow. They were supposed to be go ing to the French warship but she could not be found and prisoner said that he supposed sh must have left for Canton. Accordingly, M Encarnacio resumed possession of the goods and told prisoner that he could not have them unless he could get a guarantee. next day prisoner came to the store and brought with him another man whom he represented to be the master of the Chan Man Sing shop, and who signed a guarantee for payment. The goods were delivered. subsequently turned out that the man brought by prisoner was not the master of the Chan Man Sing shop and prisoner was arrested. Mr. Pollock explained that although Ritchie, & Co. had resumed possession of the goods, yet prisoner had had possession of them and Ritchie & Co. had merel recovered the goods out of which they had been cheated. THE BROUGH COMPANY AT THE THEATRE ROYAL.

Last night the talented Brough Company repeated the Comedy, "The Liars," before a crowded audience. As a full report of the play has already appeared in these columns, it. it is only necessary to add that whole affair went with the usual style and finish, that always characterises a first class production, Mrs. Brough and her husband being greeted with loud, applause on their appearence, on the stage. Indeed the people of this colony have a much to thank these clever actors for, their plays and all apertaining to them so far leaving nothing to be desired. To night the first performance of "The Gay Lord Quex", an original play in four acts, by the same author, alonday. We understand this is the first production of this piece in Hengkong, but the Shangwhen the Brough Company were performing there, so we may look forward to seeing some-Athing good. It is only necessary to see the Brough Company once, to throughly appreciate them, and we predict bumper houses during, their very short sojoum amongst us.

THE MISSIONARY QUESTION.

The following is the continuation of Mil. Michie's lecture, at the City Hall, on Tuesday :-The only attempt to supply the want of a missionary concordat was that made by the Chinese Government itself in 1871. In that year the Tsungh Yamen issued an elaborate circular addressed in the first instance to the French Government, providing with great precision a modus vivendi for the missions. This proposal was not well received by any of the parties concerned. The British and American. Governments excused themselves from the consideration of it on the ground that it applied to the Catholic propaganda, while the Protestant missions and the Press denounced it in the usual wholesale fashion as an insidious attempt to, create a system of official espionage intended to paralyse, all mission work. I frankly confess to having taken part in this tirade. Yet, viewed in the light of the subsequent thirty years, experience, it may well seem that the Powers and the missions missed: an opportunity of placing the propaganda on a satisfactory working footing. The first proposals of the Chinese Government were, not necessarily final; they invited discussion, and de fair discussion might have evolved a scheme which would have met the reasonable requirements of all; and if the British and American Governments had taken part in a conference with the French, the result must have been such a definition of the privileges of the Catholic missions as would have placed a check; on the extravagant pretensions they have since developed. The Chinese circular was divided. into eight heads, each proposal being accompanied by a full explanation of the reason for. it, based upon actual experience. It is too long for quotation, and indeed no quotation would be fair that did not include, with the regulation proposed, the argument attached to it. The document is one and indivisible, and can only be considered as a whole. It was published as a Blue-book, the number of which I have not got, and was appended to a brochure which I, published in 1892.

Whatever the defects of the Chinese circular, was at least a tentative effort to eliminate from the missionary question the elements of danger to the State. By refusing even to consider it, the Western Powers placed themselves prima facie in the wrong, and thus incurred pretty nearly the whole responsibility for the outbreaks which have marked the past thirty years. A cruel injury had been done to the Chinese people in forcibly opening their country to foreign missionaries without any regulations for their control, or clear definition of their status. The injury was aggravated by the refusal to listen to any suggestion for supplying the want, after the need for it had been demontrated. The Christian nations thus owe an immense moral debt to China, a debt which is quite beyond their power to discharge. I is a question whether their conscience is sufficiently sensitive to induce them to pay even a trifling instalment. For nations, have kind of conscience, though its operation is ant to be fitful. We have heard for instance of pecuniary indemnities being exacted by one Power from another, and when found excessive the overplus has, in exceptional cases, been refunded. It would be a small reparation for. the injury inflicted on China were the two great non-aggressive Protestant Powers even now to put a bridle on missionaries of their nationality and prohibit them from meddling." in Chinesespolitics in any manner whatsoevers The missionaries enjoy liberties in the interior of China which are denied to merchants. Let them, on pain of having their privileges withdrawn, confine themselves to religious teaching, the sole ground on which they enjoy these immunities: Of course evasion would be practised, just as under the strictest preventive system smuggling is practised. Witnessopium on the Canton River. But there is some virtue even in the mere stigmatising of a practice as illegal. The better class of missionaries would obey the law, those who did not would lose in repute, and one or two recalcitrants expelled from the country would at least prove on the part of their Government a desire to protect the peaceable Chinese both from the meddlers in local quarrels and from sedition mongers on a grander scale. It is not wholly beyond the bounds of possibility that some of the more important missionary bodies themselves might be disposed to meet their Governments half way in devising means of freeing their missions from the political taint, though jealousy of competitors would no doubt stand

It is not, however, for us to formulate regulations for the government of missionaries. Our ambition would be amply satisfied if the public and the Governments concerned would take thought of their moral obligations in this matter, as a preliminary step, and if the missionaries would but consider the sacred calling in a rather purer light than some of them have up till noon of the 19th Other Asiatics o been disposed to do, and render to Gaesar the It is but a very small corner of the vast and thought they all must be extremely indebted to | Course No. 23. Mr. Michie for the very broad and philosophic view he had taken on the whole question? He wished to speak from the point of view of the missionary. It had been his privilege to live in China for over twenty-one years, and he would like to point out for the consideration of ladies and gentlemen present some of the assumptions which, he thought, were incorrect in the lecture. They could justly venture to take exception to some of the assumptions put forward. He did not know whether he had heard correctly, but one of them which he would-like to emphasise was that there had been a very universal disposition to interfere, North, South, East and West, with the political rights of officials, and the political rights of the people. He did not think justice had been done to the extremely difficult position taken up by the non-Christian population. He could give ver fair instances of that in very many parts the country. There had been a general as sumption of the disposition on the part of the Protestant, missionary to interfere with the legal and political customs of the country. Ninety-nine out of one hundred missionaries did not interfere to such a very great extent as had been assumed. There were certain things which came before the missionary, which he must take cognizance of, and the general argument of the lecturer was one which, he thought, must be urged more against the judgment of the missionary, than against the general principles which he adopted and which were laid down by the missionary society. Then again the assumption of the philosophic position of the non-interference did the part of the Christian nations. He considered that they, as representatives of great Christian nations. and the great forces of the West must present to the heather population the point of view o the permanent standing orders of the Christianity which all of them professed (Hear). thought for the credit of men like himself, and the credit of men like his Bishop, who was not there that evening, but who, had gone to Foochow, and men like Bishop Scott; men like Griffith John of Hankow, Bishop Moule of Mid China, and Mr. Muirhead of Shanghai, all of whom for many years-some of them for forty or fifty years-had laboured in China, that it was an entirely wrong assumption to maintain that they were guided by principles of craft and double-dealing in advancing their mission. Some of them had given not only long years of service, but some of their fortunes as well for the cause they had advocated. He thanked them for their kindness in listening to him, and at the same time he would like to thank Mr. Michie for the very careful review he had given of the whole question, and the philosophic presentation of it in his lecture.

diffidence concerning it. It seemed to him that, as far as he could hear, the assumption ,was that the missionaries were waiting, willing, and desiring to do everything in China except the thing they were sent to do. That was the impression to his mind which the lecturer seemed to convey, and it was sought to establish that the missionaries were constantly interfering with things which did not concern them. He had been in China for over twenty years, and knew others who had seen 30 or 40 years' , service, and he seldom, if ever, heard of the interference referred to in the lecture. For himself he had only been asked to give advice twice in 20 years, and in each instance a very pleasant and amicable result had followed. There had been cases of interference brought, to his notice, but they did not amount to anything like that presumed in the lecture. Ther had been cases brought to his notice when "it almost impossible not to interfere and he instanced one which occurred about two years ago. That was a doctor, a very respectable man with a good practice, who became a Christian. Immediately it was known, he was outlawed by the villagers with whom he lived Part of his property was claimed by a neighwho had a grudge against him. The usual persecutions followed. The man who was seeking to take the doctor's land was advised by his wife not to proceed because the case, was objously unjust. In anger the man killed his wife, and then brought a charge of murder against the doctor. The latter at once brought (the case to him (Mr. Bone) and al though nothing was done for him, it was true the case was looked, into, and some steps taken, but it was afterwards decided to let-it alone. He (the speaker) denied that the missionaries interfered in any manner like that which had been presumed in the lecture. had been assumed that the missionaries were in China because they were supported by gun! boats and torpedo-boats. It was altogether overlooked that they could be there moved by any thought of the lives of devoted people like Griffith John and others, he felt they were there because they were moved by, a higher power, a lostier ambition-they were there because they wished the Chinese to know that above all and beyond all, for themselves, and for every one there was a common Father. His Excellency again rising said they had listened to a very able defence. After all, nothing could ever be lost by having a case put forward, clearly and strongly, on both sides. He thought the thanks of the meeting were due to Mr. Michie for attending there that evening. There was a great deal to be said on both sides and he had no doubt that they who had not had the experience of coming in contact with the state of affairs in the interior of China would find it very difficult sitting in their chairs at home to realise the importance of refusing to interfere in affairs that might easily be righted by tendering a little advice. But they could all realise that there might be circumstances in which no man with a human heart in his body, could refrain from interfering even though he knew that trouble would follow. The grave and terrible events of the past year had shown them that human nature was pretty much the same in China as elsewhere. He had been reading lately of the terrible trials of Mr. and Mrs. Green and their party, and was filled with admiration at the extraordinary fortitude displayed during those dreadful three weeks they were in the hands of the Chinese. But he also was struck by the fact that men had come forward, not Christians, but Boxers, and had risked their lives to assist them to escape. These men had shown in the highest degree many of those qualities which now and again were regarded as being the exclusive property Christian nations. Where such feelings had been shown; and where the people had evinced those qualities of sympathy, of pity and of self-sacrifice, there must always be hone for the future of China. He concluded by asking them to accord most heartily a vote of thanks to Mr. Michie for his kindness in delivering the

The Rev. C. Bone said he was not quite

THE CRISIS IN NORTH.

SHANGHAI.

SHANGHAL, April 15th. The Case of Ex-governor Liu.

A Soochow dispatch states that Liu Shuang, who had to resign his post of Governor Chekiang last September, owing toshis authorising the local officials of that province to destroy missions and massacre their inmates last July, and who has remained in Southow ever since leaving Hangchow, is now under surveillance of the authorities of the former city. This is in consequence, so it is stated, of a secret telegrim from Li Hung-chung to Governor Nich in view of dealing out punishment to the guilty ex-Governor as requested by the Foreign Ministers at Peking.

The Fighting at Sinmingting.

An official telegram received here by the local mandarins yesterday states that confirm atory advices have been received from Jehol to the effect that the commander of the Chinese troops who ten days ago fought the Russians in the vicinity of Sinmingting, some 80 miles west of Moukden, was Chin Ch'ang, the wellknown Manchu ex-Brigadier-General tof Moukden. Chin Ch'ang, it is stated had some 4,000 Manchus-his own immediate followersand about an equal number of Mongols, disbanded Chinese soldiers from Shanhaikuan Chinchou, etc., and mounted bandits, who had flocked to his banner after the fall of Moukden last summer. Chin Ch'ang, it is supposed was surprised by the Russians, but he managed to retreat northwards towards the Mongol frontier in an orderly manner, losing nearly 80 men in killed and wounded. The Russians lost about 30 men in killed and wounded, and would have given chase to the retiring Chinese had their force equalled the latter; but the Chinese being numerically much superior to the Russians the latter dared not pursue the former, who are now encamped on the Mongol Manchurian border.

Still at it.

A telegram from Peking emanating from reliable source states that the Russian officials in Peking are still secretly coercing Prince Ching and Li Hung-chang into memorialising sure that he had heard the lecture dislinctly, the Empress Dowager to allow them to sign and therefore he spoke with some amount of the original Manchurian Agreement, with what success remains to be seen. -N. THE LATE CAPTAIN CLEMENS.

At, the Imperial German Consulate on the 13th ins., at Shanghait an inquiry was held nto the circumstances surrounding the death of Captain Clemens, late of the steamer Kwangping. The proceedings were presided over by Dr. Knipping, Vice Consul for Germany, and Mr. King, H.B.M.'s Police Magistrate and Coroner. Mr. F. Ellis appeared to represent the friends of the deceased."

Frank Grey, Chief Officer of the Kwangping, sworn, stated that he last saw the Captain after the dog watch, between 6 and 8 o'clock. He seemed to be in his usual spirits and manner. Witness could not say when he went to-bed. Witness left the watch at $ o'clock and went straight to his bunk and after that heard the Captain walking over his cabin up and down: As a rule the captain always left some night order. Anything of consequence was to be reported to him. At 12.30 witness went down with a pencil to sign the order book. While in the act of signing the book he heard what he thought to be a rifle shot or some firearm. He dropped the pencil and rushed out. The first man he saw was the quarter master. He was standing on deck. It was a moonlight night and besides the electric light was shining through he windows. He asked the quarter-master "What thing?" and whether any one had gone topside" and the reply was "no." He asked he quartermaster at the wheel if he had heard anything and he said no. Witness thought probably something was wrong in the saloon. He went in the saloon with the quartermaster and found the electric light on and a lady passenger asleep on the settee. Went to the Captain's cabir and saw him asleep in his bunk. There was a glass window in the cabin and the electric light shone through it. Onthis occasion he did not speak, From the time witness heard the shot to the time be looked into the captain's, room no more than five minutes had elapsed. Went back to the bridge to keep watch. While doing so he thought over the matter and came to the conclusion that some gauge glass had probably exploded. In the night order the Captain gave instructions to alter the course at. 5; o'clock. The night was not stormy but the water was somewhat broken though it was clear overhead. At 5 minutes ! to 4 o'clock the course was altered to S.S.E. The captain never gave any orders verbally but always through the book and they had to inspect the book accordingly. His idea was to have a check on the officers. When witness altered the course the quartermaster, went to tell the captain of it. - Immediately afterwards | daily to be seen diving for coins thrown into the quartermaster came to him and said the water by passengers. That there is danger "Captain face no proper, more better you go was proved by a melancholy incident which look see" He asked "Captain have talkee?" and we have to-day to record, says the Singapore he said no. He then stepped into the Captain's F. P. of the 12th inst. Mr. H. On the following day the chief engineer said it would be injurious to le! the body remain there and that they could put the captain in the coffin in the same position as he was in his bunk. They decided to remove the captain's body in the presence of everybody. The chief engineer was the first to approach the bunk and he turned the bed clothes down and they then saw a gun clenched in the captain's hands. CRISIS IN CUBA.

GENERAL GOMEZ PROTESTS AGAINST LYING REPOR'TS.

ABSOLUTE INDEPENDENCE ONLY CAN AVERT WAR.

editorially with the fresh crisis in Cuba and blames the United States Government for the RECALLING POSTED LETTERS. to assume a protectorate over the island instead of fulfilling the President's clearly expressed promise of absolute autonomy is the rootcause of a crisis that may easily develop into bloodshed and devastation throughout the country. The Philadelphia paper says:

Should this country drift into war with Cuba will be solely because the solemn pledge to grant independence has been basely violated. American newspapers of a certain kind will share the responsibility.

There is observable in a considerable portion of the press a disposition to deceive the people, if not the editors, as to the state of feeling in the island, and to misrepresent the attitude of the foremost men there. A lying interview with Ceneral Gomez, circulated from ocean to ocean last week, is an instance in point. The man whom the Cubans hold in the same esteem as our. Revolutionary forefathers held George Washington was made in this interview to approve the continued military occupation of the country for whose liberty he has fought, and to declare that if the American troops should be withdrawn he would go with

The North American is one of the very few American newspapers represented in Cuba by special correspondents. To Mr. Sutherland for this journal, General Gomez, with natural indignation, repudiated the fabricated interview and reassirmed his loyalty, to the cause with which his name will ever be in illustrious association. No one who has kept reasonably well informed of events in Cuba and of Cuban opinion was deceived for a moment by the invented interview, but it was given national publicity and implied endorsement by newspapers which feel so contemptuous of weakness as to scorn to tell the truth about it."

If, by any means, the American people can be got to believe that the Cubans cheerfully acquiesce in the protectorate which Congress has decreed, then should the island burst into a flame of despairing insurrection; the revolt of a whole nation against submission to a pledge-breaking neighbour will be pictured as. an outbreak of a few malcontents whose selfish political ambitions have been thwarted. Weshall see the same journals that now refuse to tell the truth about Cuba rising in noblé rage to deplore ingratitude, and incidentally to charge newspapers which have told the truthas The North American is telling it daily in the cable dispatches and letters of its correspondent-with encouraging rebellion against the lawful authority of the United States, The people of Cuba-their leaders, who have proved their right to leadership sword in hand; and the masses of the population as well-will be satisfied with nothing short of absolute independence. They fought Spain for that, and that was promised them by the American Congress. Deny them independence and the Cubans cannot but feel that they have been cheated and betrayed. They are in a very dangerous temper at this moment. That is the plaintruth as to Cuba. Attempted concealment of it by the press will only contribute toward maddening the people of the island. They are not noted for meekness and patience, and the insult of misrepresentation added to the injury of persidious recansation of a freely-given promise must inevitably deepen their sense of intolerable wrong. Therefore the American newspapers which are not ashamed to lie about cozened and writhing Cuba are belping to goad Gomez and his soldiers into drawing their machetes and taking to the hills once more.

Hiding the truth in the Philippines from the American people has not resulted in peace there, and there is no reason to expect that pursuing the same policy as to Cuba will produce better results.

SEIZED BY A SHARK IN COLOMBO HARBOUR.

TERRIBLE DEATH.

alt had not been generally supposed, up to the present, that any danger of being attacked by sharks, attended bathing in Colombo hars bour, especially as so many native youths are went out of the captain's cabin with the quarter, men in the boat could see the shark going for master and stood outside with him until the him again, and it is supposed that the others second officer came. The second officer looked who were bathing would have also been injured, inside and passed some remarks. He then but for the timely warring. The engineer called the other quartermaster and sent for the was bleeding freely when he was picked up, captain's boy whom he asked to go inside and the bite on his thigh being the most serious, and look. He did so and immediately rushed out- he was immediately removed to the Atlantian, side and ran away. Witness called him back and thence to the Rolne, but on the doctor and asked for the key of the cabin, which he feeling his pulse he declared him to be already locked up. He gave instructions to carry out dead.

the orders and then went to the engine room On enquiry, we learn, that the presence of St. Johns Cathedral:-Communion, 7 a.m., and told the engineers that he believed the sharks in the harbour his not unusual, and a Captain had shot himself. They asked witness | sergeant of the Waters Police in accounting what made him think so and he said he had for the native divers not being attacked said heard the report of a gun. Witness had seen that sharks never attack anything dark. You a dead man befort." again. After he had breakfast he went to the ACCIDENT ON A TANK STEAMER AT SINGAPORE.

An extraordinary and unfortunately fatal accident which resulted in the death of two men occurred on the oil tank steamship Trigonia at an early hour this morning, says the Straits Times of the 12th inst. Four men were sent down to clean out one of the big tanks, which had been previously inspected by the ship's officers and found free from gas. Prior to that the men had refused to go to work on the ground that there was gas in the tank, but this had been thoroughly cleared out by means of windsails etc., and at the time the men went 'below there was absolutely no gas perceptible. In order to more effectuually clean the tank the bottom was covered with water about a foot deep. The oil from the bottom and sides floats on the water and s easily pumped out; and this is the process of cleaning generally resorted to before finally cleaning the iron with lime. As the four men who had been detailed to the work were splashing about in this water, the whole four of them suddenly collapsed. Efforts were immediately made to rescue them and two of them were quickly hauled up alive, but in the last stages of suffocation. The third brought up was stone dead: Before any attempt could be made to rescue the fourth the gas had become so strong that to enter the tank meant immediate death to the attempthad to be abandoned. The victims were Malays. It is, so far, impossible to The Philadelphia North American deals determine how and whence the gas originated.

USEFUL AUSTRALIAN SYSTEM.

According to the Deputy Post-master-General of Victoria, the system of stopping letters n transit at the request of the sender has not only worked well, in that Colony, but, judging from the cases he quotes, has in many instances saved serious trouble to those who had they been in this or almost any other country, would have had no chance of recalling their words. The system has been in operation for over ten years, and Mr. F. L. Outram says that in no case has complaint ever been made, while the privilege has been a boon to many a troubled applicant. In describing the method of procedure, Mr. Outram says the applicant is invariably unknown to him. He requires he full address to be written out for comparison of handwriting, a complete description of the contents, the reason for desirthe return of the letter, &c. If satisied, he allows the letter to be opened in his presence and reads sufficient of its contents to remove any doubt as to the genuineness of the statements made: . "Whether the letter is handed back or is altered and re-enveloped, I -aiways retain the original envelope and write on it the whole circumstances, and I retain the envelope for a reasonable time, say 12 months, in case of any subsequent inquiry." A somewhat similar though more complicated system is in vogue under the really excellent postal system of British India:

THE ROYAL YACHT "OPHIR."

There is no suggestion of false modesty nose round the comer of the dockyard, replendent in her white paint, relieved by the broad band of royal blue and the buff of the funnels, masts, and ventilators. Wing the White Ensign at the stern and the Union Jack at the bows, in token of her transfer from the mercantile to the Royal Navy, she is the latest and most graceful and spick-and-span addition to his Majesty's Fleet.

The famous liner has been completely transformed. On her decks mingle bluejackets and marines, above the noise of the final preparstions, ring out the short, sharp orders of naval officers, and on every hand there are indications that the merchant ship of yesterday has become the Royal yacht of to-day. She is a "ladylike" craft, and has always behaved as such in the roughest weather, thanks to her good form, and her double bilge-keels. She has carned the reputation of being one of the most steady passenger steamers afloat, and is as swift-18 knots-and safe as she is comfortable, being provided with a double cellular bottom and divided and sub-divided into many watertight compartments. Though as far back; as November it was decided to charter the Ophir for Royal use, not until a day or two before Christmas did she arrive at Tilbury Docks; after her last voyage from Australia. In the intervening weeks, the most surprising changes have been effected. Messrs. S. Waring 'and Sons, a firm which has probably fitted up more sumptuous vessels of pleasure than any other, were entrusted with the task of altering the vessel to suit the tastes of their Royal Hignesses, and under the peculiar circumstances, and especially in view of the short time available, they have carried it out mostadmirably. Without delay designs were prepared, and in the succeeding weeks from 500 to 800 men, joiners, carpenters, decorators and furnishers, have been engaged. As the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York will spend over seven months, off and on, in the yacht, it is only natural that they should have evinced the liveliest interest in all the designs of furniture and fittings, the most important of which have also been submitted to the King and Oneen. In fact, the Ophie may be regarded as embodying his Majesty's lideas of what a ship of State should be:

The general outline of the arrangements can be very briefly set out. Amidships, on the promenade deck, the first-class saloon has become the Royal dining room, forward of which are the apartments of the Duke and Duchess. Be low these have been specially constructed a series of roomy and comfortable cabins for the suites of their Royal Highnesses and the attendants respectively, while above the rooms of the Duke and Duchess is the drawing room; and nearly at the same height the smoking saloon, all being constructed so that communication can be effected without going on to any other deck. Thus, practically, the whole of the vessel, from amidships forward, is devoted to the Royal party, ..

The officers will use the second-class saloon, aft as their ward-room, with the cabins adjacent and will have their smoking-room right astern, on the boat-deck.

Interest naturally centres round the apartments which will be occupied by the two members of the Royal family. As already indicated, these are situated on the upper deck, and consist of two suites of bed, sitting, and bath rooms, separated by a passage admirably ventilated by two trunks running right up to the boat deck, the highest of the six decks with which the vessel is provided. These apartments are a remarkable illustration of what can be done in a short space of time. When the Ophir reached England a few weeks ago, on the space now covered by these rooms stood a nest of ordinary cabins. These had to be removed, laying bare the decks above and below and the fron sides of the ship. For the support of the structure overhead it was necessary to replace the old stanchions by new ones. to the satisfaction of the Board of Trade,

These changes having been effected, it remained for Messrs. Waring to plan and erect the Royal apartments, which are bright, airy rooms, simply but most effectively painted white, unrelieved by any note of colour. Al the furniture in these apartments has been specially designed and manufactured, and is securely fitted. Everything is of the best British make; there is nothing in the ship on which foreign labour of any kind has been employed, and, consequently, the Ophir will be a travelling proof of the artistic taste. ingenuity, and labour of the workers of this country. All the appointments in the Duchess's bed room are white, the bedstead being of simple, design, in silver-plated In the sitting-room, to which communication is obtained by sliding doors, satinwood, of specially fine-figured grain, has been selected; and in the Duke's day apartment the writing deak, chairs, and book-cases are of oak. this Royal Highness's bed-room is also white throughout, but in keeping with his popular title of "the Sailor Prince," he has had a cot instead of a bedstead fitted for his use. In both bed-rooms the washhandstands are of onyx, and the fittings are silver-plated. while in pleasing contrast to the white paint, the eye res's on specially-designed Wilton carpets, laid over corticine, rendering the tread particularly soft, on the chintz window hangings, and the light taffeta portiones. The general scheme of colour throughout is a light delicate green, which finds expression in carpets, upholsiery and hangings, and the apartments are admirably lighted by large, square windows on each side, with six easily opened scuttles looking forward.

From the forward end of this passage a short stair deads directly to the quarters of the Royal servants below, enabling them to respond to the bells at a moment's notice. At the other end is the grand stairway, with a splendid circular sweep, leading to the drawing room on the promenade deck above, and beyond, therefore aft of the Royal apartments on the same deck, is the dining saloon, a handsome, lofty chamber, the decoration of which has required no change, it is so exquisite in every detail and most appropriate. The saleon is lighted by four square windows at the sides, and in the centre is a lofty dome fitted with stained glass inside and with an outer casing of pierced steel. In the space between these two roofs are fitted electric lamps, which suffuse an effective, subdued light over the apartment and throw into relief the the arms of the United Kingdom and of the four chief Australian Colonies, which are supported by figures representing their chief industries. The dome's decorations are gold and white. All the familiar furniture in a passenger steamer has been removed, and in place of it Messrs. Waring have designed mahogany dining tables in the Ronaissance style, so planned that they can be arranged with one centre table to seat twenty-six of the Royal party, or, joined together, and set out in herse-shoe fashion, to accommodate fiftysir, and manufactured also so as to cuable their width to be increased to four or. five feet, as may be desired. The armchairs at the main table have been made from an old richly-carved Chippendale model, and are upholstered in red post-office leather. as are the other thirty chairs and the lounges on either side of this large and handsome apartment, which is hung with a number of interest- son, sppeared on the scene.

ing pictures. This saloon will also serve as concert-room and theatre, and, thinks to most convenient arrangements, the transformation about the Royal yacht Ophir as she pokes her can be effected in less than an hour. The after part is admirably suited to the stage, which has been constructed in sections; curtains are handy, ready to be hung at the shortest notice; the trunk of the dome forms an excellent proscenium; and thus there are present all the essentials for a place of entertainment, with exits giving direct access by two stairs to the main deck cabins. Above the end of the "saloon is the gallery in which the R.M.L.I.

band will be placed. As already indicated, a nobly proportioned staircase leads from the dining saloon and the Royal apartments up to the drawing and smokng room on the promenade deck, which is 252ft. n length and wide in proportion, and will be greatly appreciated during the many weeks of confinement on board which will prove inevitable. At the fore-part of the deck is situated the drawing-room, which is a large and pleasant apartment, panelled in resewood and satinwood. Since the Ophir reached England, this apartment has been entirely refurnished. The satin-wood Sheraton furniture is upholstered in a special design of blue silk damask, with a white pattern, which was selected by her Royal Highness and woven at Spitalfields. The two shafts that pass through the room have been covered with engravings, and round the sides are hung a choice selection of black-and-white pictures sent from York House and other Royal residences. One of those, which is to he placed immediately outside the apartment, is of particular interest, and has, it is stated, never been copied. It is a beautifully-drawn crayon portrait of Queen Victoria, showing her late Majesty as she appeared in the early years of her reign, with the ribbon of the Order of Immediately aft of the drawing-room, on either side of the grand staircase, are two writing-rooms, the seats being of blue leather. Amidships, and therefore aft of the drawingroom and the dome of the dining-saloon, is the smoking-room, a most pleasant place, running the whole width of the ship. It is covered with green corticine, and provided with four double writing-desks, in inlaid oak, models of comfort and convenience, and in imitation of those used at the Mailborough Club. The panelling and chairs are also; of oak, the latter covered with a subdued shade of green morocco. The remainder of the appointments include card tables and book-cases. The latter, by an ingenious arrangement, can be readily converted tions, such as will probably be of frequent occurrence. Some features attract notice on the boat, or uppermost, deck. On the bridge, amidships, has been built a capacious shelter for the steersmen and officers on, duty, and in the bridge-house ittelf, on the very top of the whole floating palace-its very pinnacle-two cabins have been combined and fitted up for the use of their Royal Highnesses. Here again the scheme of colouring is most pleasing. . It is a harmony of blue, and white. The paint is of pure white, and the room is carpeted with à rich blue Wilton, upholstered in blue morocco, and contains a pedestal and writing and card tables, occasional chairs and cupboards—in short, it has been converted into just such an niry, unconventional apartment as the Duke and Duchess will probably prefer on hot days in the tropics, when there is hardly a breath o airstirring. -The Daily Telegruph.

THAT MONEY COULD NOT BUY

. "She's a wee bit fresh, sir, but in the pink of condition. Twen't be her fault if the hounds leaves you behind to-day.".

"I'll promise you it shan't be mine," I laughed, vaulting from the hostel step into the saddle. "This is going to be, my red-letter day; and don't you forget it when I come back. Here, added, dropping a coin into the man's palm, drink to the good luck of me and the mare. She's the best blood money can buy, and didn't buy herformyself, either. She's intended for a present to a lady, who is also best blood money can buy was on my lips, but changed it to-"a flyer after hounds; so don't be surprised if the mare changes ownership before the day's out. Let her go:" :

A five minute's capter and I was passing the rambling old country house they called Greymere, the home, by favour, of the mortgagee, of Nita Grey and her world-ignorant old father, huntsman and country gentleman...

And I was the mortgagee. That is where the bit galled, as Nita would say-Nita, the best figure, prettiest face, finest horsewoman in the country, the woman who had stolen my_ heart's love, yet hesitated to replace it with

It was odd the way that Licity bom and bred, instinct with every pulse of city life that beat a way to wealth and luxury, had fallen a victim to Nita's smile, for Greymere was not the first old country mansion I had held in mortgage, or sold up, brick, stick and mortar.

It was on my third visit in connection with the mortgage that Nita waylaid me and, with out-spoken apologies for asking a favour of a comparative stranger, explained that she had a sweet-heart, Jack Addington, who, having wasted his inheritance, had set out, three years previously, for America to retrieve his fortunes; that for nine months she had heard from him consistently, but thereafter his letters grew rare and, finally, stopped. Would I, who talked of my American agents, glean some news of his whereabouts, so that she could write to him of her undying affection, absolute pauper though he might be, for in his poverty she saw the explanation of his silence. Auseful American agent of mine found an Addington answering the description in Galifornia, in such a state of abject penury that it was most improbable he would ever return home to England. . But by the time that information reached me Nita had become an indispensable appendage to my life's happiness. So I proclaimed Jack Addington dead, and lest a halo of romance should cling to his memory I set his death in sordid surroundings-in a New York gambling

Nita, of course, wept and wailed, and would not be comforted, so I, perforce, had to wait. The mortgage fell due. Should I foreclose, sell up the family home, and turn father and daughter into the street? Not while the exhibition of a little leniency might win me Nita for a wife, But she would not agree to sell herself to me-that is how she put it-threaten how would, and her old father was as obstinate 1 so at last I vowed that if I did not receive a definite and satisfactory reply at the very next hunt meet I would foreclose without further

Then came along frost, and here was the first hunt meet in five weeks.

What would her answer be? The birds, twittering in tree and hedgerow, pleased my ear; the smell of soft earth filled my nostrils and tickled my palate; the fresh breeze swelled my breast with hope. Alt will be all right to-day," I said.

I was early at the spot appointed for the meet, but so were others, and it was not long before. Nits Grey, esconted by a county J. P. and his

Nita obeyed my mute request and gode up beside me, a little apart from the rest. "To-day," I murmured, " is the day."

"To-day?" she queried, in a tremulous un "It's in the contract," I replied. "And why should you wish to hostpone the event? you could only know the turbulent state of my feelings, the love that is fluttering at my heart, athirst for one little word, one sweet smile, one touch of pity! Do you doubt my love?" "I-I don't know," she murmured, her eyes cast down demurely, her hand caressing the horse's mane. "I remember, of course, that you have us in your power, that you can sell us up to-day if you will, that you have already given us five months' grace, and that you are open to a bargain-your mortgage deed for m promise of marriage. Also that I did promise to give you a definite answer the first hunt meet after the frost gave in." "Which is to-day."

"But do I doubt your love?" She put the question to the sir, to the hounds leashed in the near distance, to the thick copse at our elbow, to anything or anybody but to me. " Is love selfish or unselfish ?" she asked suddenly. "Selfish," I confidently replied, "for I am hungering for you." "Then I suppose it is possible that you love me : but--- " I am selfish too. I want-Guess, Mr. Carstang, what I want ! . Her face was still half hidden, her eyes still throb of joy, for I knew that she was playing a blithesome game with me, the sweet, coquettish young game of love." "Nita!" I murmured and wished the crowd of huntsmen and dogs at the far end of the universe. "Nital my darling ! To-day is the day, and you are its sun. Why can't I side up to you, and pledge our troth, lip to lip, heart to 'Hush!" she held up a warning finger. " The eyes of the country are upon us."

"Then let us get out of range," I suggested: What do you and I care about hunting to-day?" "Speak for yourself, sir," she interrupted, with mock impertinence. "You are taking too much for granted. I asked you a simple question: What do you think I am wanting more than anything on earth? No, sir; don't attempt to guess. - I will tell you but hot now," "When?" I eagerly demanded.

"When I am tirediof following the hounds. Think what people would say if you and I were to make off together now. 1 Have you no sense of propriety? No, not another word. Ride hard and straight, and keep in touch with me. When I give the sign, pause, and I will tell you. See I the fox has broken covert. View Nita and I were fortunately placed, and we made an excellent start. Straight as a die ran the fox as far as the loam pit; then, swinging to the right, he crept through a thicket and started on a semi-circular tour homeward: The pace grew hot, but Nita, the huntaman, and I kept the lead that luck had given us at got all. the start. And I watched our progress with the keenest interest, for every inch the hounds gained upon their intended prey brought me nearer, to the moment when I should hear from 'Nita's lips the 'sweet truth that was laughing there.

Yes, undoubtedly laughing, and the sight of them gave me infinite satisfaction, and Maughed top, sheer joy of heart that at last, at last I had gained my dearest desire. We; were leaping a stiff hedge together. Nita needed no second bidding, but, with my mind a chaos of delight, reined in behind the woman I worshipped and waited for her to stop. The fox swept through the clump of trees the hounds leapt after him, the huntsman hard upon their heefs. Nearer and nearer grew the Lovers' Knot, till the trees were almost upon us, till I stooped instinctively to avoid the sweeping branches; but Nita did not stop, Frankly, Mr. Carstang, I would have left you to the honewhipping you deserve but for the fact that-though for your own selfish ends-you have refrained from turning us out of house; and home."

It. was best, I thought, not to await fack Addington's coming, but to test the truth of Nita's story elsewhere.

Alast it was but too true. My agent had misled me. The man named Addington he had found in California was not the reformed gold-mining Jack Addington from British Columbia who had come home to marry Nita-the Nita who that day had gratified her heart's desire, and made, mandrink to Sthe dregs a cup of bitter disappointment. The Rangoon Times.

THE ADVENTURE OF LADY BLUMLEIGH.

Lady Horsham was of the casual schoolthe kind that invites people to lunch, forgets all about it and on the day is found to have gone somewhere else herself. Therefore lest much to be desired, and the persons concerned in the dark with regard to each other's names. Thetefore when Sir Ardley Fontaine found himself seated side by side at the luncheon-table with the lively and attractive lady, he had not the remotest notion what her appellation might be, whether she were maid, matron, or widow, or indeed, any very definite idea beyond the fact that she was handsome, attractive, and exquisitely dressedstay, on second thoughts, he would have added; probably married. . There was a total absence of that draw-on-draw-off expression which is characteristic of most girls, and which seems to say, " You will please to keep off this particular piece of grass," mainly, no doubt, with the view of exciting the desire for that form of

In fact, she proved a woman of the world, ready to do her share to make things go. Briefly, they got on. The conversation fluttered lightly from flower to flower. "Miserliness," he said, "always seems to me to take its, most unpleasant form when it appears in the very rich." "Its most unpleasant form," she agreed, with what looked curiously like a shudder. "But surely it must be a kind of madness in them, Don't you think so ?" "I couldn't say, I know that a relation of mine, an enormously rich man lived in constant fear of overspending an income which most people, would have found some difficulty in getting through without the assistance of a yacht or a stud. He owned two fine country. seats and some immense blocks of flats in an expensive quarter; but he let them all, and ived in two fooms in a back street. Once when I went to see him there. I found him in an old dressing-gown, tied with a piece of The girdle, it seemed, had broken, and he could not 'afford' to buy a new one. And when he died, he left something like a million. Think of the contrast." The million must have been very nice for his relations," said the lady, pointing an inquiry with a significant glance.

"Oh, don't suspect me," replied Sir Ardley, laughing. "I didn't get a penny of it. Though on the Adelphi stage I should, no doubt, have.

"Oh, poetical justice—the happy ending." You see, some time ago an ancestor quarrelled with his eldest son, and left all he could away to the younger-including a considerable stretch of land in London. That, of course, has turned out the most valuable of all. and that was why the old gentleman was so wealthy. As it happened, he was the last of the younger line, and I represent the elder, Therefore, you see, poetical justice required that the property should come back."

"How annoying that it did not !" "Well, afterall, I was only a distant cousin is whom he never showed any interest; the people to whom he left it were no doubt very dear to him."

"You take it very easily, especially as ought never to have been his to leave." The law says otherwise."

"Well, you must hate the people who supplanted you." "No, I don't think I'do. I'don't seem to remember to do so. . I never expected it, and it is two years ago now." "Well, I should, I know," said the lady with great decision. "You see, I am so fond of travelling, and that fills up one's mind. I have just come back from a tour round the world." They talked of travel after this, and drifted round through Cairo and Capetown to the latest achievement of the blograph. The other man struck in about then, and soon after the "I should like to pursue that acquaintance," thought Sir Ardley when the men followed.

demurely, "Sometimes." "Shall you to-morrow morning?" "Pethaps, if it is fine."

It proved fine, and Rollen Row is most admirably adapted for the continuation of a flirtation for those who know how to use it Sir Ardly did ; and certainly the lady's husband, if he had happened to be present, would have had reason to feel a little anxious. time Sir Ardly asked if he might call.

She glanced at him, half in doubt, half in amusement. "Aren't you rushing it rather?" she said, "I wonder now whether you even

"Of course. Lady Blumleigh! I didn't catch it. I confess, at first, but I made a point of asking Lady Horsham afterwards."

"I see, Well, I think I must introduce you to my aunt. She is in the carriage at the Corner. She is-I m an I am staying with her, and then, you see, you could ask her? to let you call on-her!" There seemed a world of meaning in the eyes she turned on him. He was almost bewildered y the light in them.

The introduction was quickly accomplished. The aunt, Mrs. Onslow Gardner, proved to be a pleasant, smiling, elderly dame with lovely, soft, frosted hair. She appeared to be very cheerful in temperament, bright with continuous smiles, and not at all disposed to play the part of dragon. . . .

Riding home at last by himself-eleven fathoms deep in love at least-he caught sight of Lord Putney's grinning face in a hansom. "I saw you. Sly dog!" called out the old

This remark highly exasperated Sir Ardley. Being intimately acquainted with his venerable uncle's wenknesses, he was well aware that the old gentleman could keep nothing to himself. There was, therefore, the disagrecable prospect that in half a dozen clubs that afternoon there would be satyr-like chuckling over the doings of "that gay dog, my nephew, Ardley

"There are times when one feels that it would not only be lawful but positively enjoyable to kick one's uncle," mused the undutiful nephew. These considerations did not prevent his pursuing the adventure. He called, asked for Mrs. Onslow Gardner, was shown in, and found the object of his devotion alone.

"My aunt is out. She will be sorry to miss You will have to be satisfied with me instead." He repiled. Is it not easy to guess what he said? She demurred in no way to his answer. and he continued in the same strain. She would have been blind if she had not perceived that he was making love to her, and it did not seem to displease her. Suddenly she spoke, with rising colour and beaving breast. "There is one thing that I must tell you-now. You think that my name is Lady Blumleigh, don't you?"

"Yes; why, you told me it was." "No. You told me it was and I merely did not contradict you."

"Then it isn't?" "No, Lady Blumleigh was the fat lady in purple with high colour and very golden hair who sat on your other side at that lunch, and whom really you neglected most disgracefully."

"Then what is your name?" Eleanor-Eleanor Hatgold, widow of-And then she stopped and blushed crimson at the remembrance that her remarks might seem to be a quotation from the service of banns.

The truth of the matter is they have no feeling for the artistic pleasure of embroidery. They seem to think that if you have to tell a lie you just fell a lie and leave it. They do not see the pleasure of inventing the pattern and adding little twists and curls and traceries here and there and making a really finished and artistic piece of work of it. The other day a man and a girl, who were not supposed by the superior authorities to be meetings met and discussed how they should meet again at a dinner to be given by him.

"I think, said he, " I had better write to her (the chaperon), and ask her to come and bring "Don't be so idiotic," said she. "You write

"Perhaps she'll say she will come and never notice I have asked her to bring you." "Oh. I shall know when the letter comes, and then I shall be able to say all sorts of things to help our scheme? Look here, I think it will be much better if don't write at all ; you manage the whole thing. Seems to me you understand this kind of thing better than I do."

Poor youth, the husband of the future! He probably labours under the impression that when he marries, his wife will quite forget how well she understood all that sort of thing. It isn't that we want to plot, or be deceitful, as the Sunday books of my youth would describe, it. But you really can't vius tramp through life, in heavy hobnailed boots, straight towards your object over hedges, and ditches . It is so much pleasanter to exercise a little ingenuity, and get your object in a more

In the main, husbands are quite bearable and their wives really appreciate their solid worth; but they musin't think that when "Them and Us" are being discussed. THE NEW FRENCH REMEDY. This successul and highly popular remedy, as employed in the Continental Hospitals by Ricord, Rostan, Jobert, Velpeau, and others, combines all the desiderate to be sought in a medicine of the kind, and surpasses everything hitherto employed. THERAPION No. 1, in a few days only, removes all discharges from the urinary organs, effectually superseding injections, the use of which does irreparable harm by laying the foundation of stricture and other serious diseases. - In dysentery, piles, irritation of the lower bowel, cough, bronchitis, asthma, and some of the more trying complaints of this kind, it will be found astonishingly efficacious, affording prompt relief where other well-tried remedies have been powerless. . THERAPION No. 2, for impurity of the blood, scurvy, pimples, spots, blotches, pains and swellings of the joints, secondary sympe toms, disease of the bones, sore throat, and all diseases for which it has been too much a fashion to employ mercury, sarsaparilla, &c., to the destruction of the sufferer's teeth and ruin climinates every poisonous matter from the THERAPION No. 3, fornervous exhaustion, waste of viullty, and all the distrossing consequences arising from early, error, excess, residence in hot, unhealthy climates, &c. It posseses surprising power in restoring strength and vigour to the debilitated. THERAPION met, be procured of the principal Cliemists and Merchants throughout the world. Price in England 2/9 and 4/6. In ordering, the purchaser should state which of the three numbers he requires, and observe that the ton has but just come home with the money to You can't do that," replied Ardley, laught right to interfere at all about one's children or ment, Stamp (in white letters on a red ground)
